

That's okay me too you don't gotta be sorry i just didn't want to be holding things up or you to think i was ignoring you!!

Doesn't she live there too? Omg

I'm sorry that's so frustrating I could only imagine

Wtf for why? We gotta get you out of there - do you want me to help look into housing support or vouchers so you can get your own space ? Or is there anything I can do to help?

There isn't housing support or anything offered? Helping hands of America used to help get people into the apartment complex I worked at, would pay their application fee / deposit and first two months and then partial after that sometimes but they do work with people!

There's also that site that's work for stay and it's usually just 10-20 hours a week. Maybe not the exact work you want but least you're out and have your own space / no one fucking with your energy

I wish I had a room and I'd let you come stay:(

Oh nooo I'm sorry::((

Want me to help look into it and I can send you some links in an hour or two?

It's okay sorry j fought with kyle and sleeping in my car because i cant anymore - can look shortly though after i recenter my nervous system

Don't be sorry humans need connection and support 🤗 no burden at all j wish I could do more

Omfg lol still no every male 18-25 is automatically enlisted right now - we gotta get trump outta there scary times ahaha

What is your zip code? And are you wanting to stay around that area or open to other areas (in or out of ny?)

M

Maddie ›

So im having like a jdk what to do w myself phase

She doesnt stay here, she stays with her boyfriend.

She called the cops on me the other day

My only option is to go to like a shelter or something like that. But its dangerous, my laptop will be a target

Im not sure what to do. I really need like a kind person w a room who could let me stay for a few months & ill work for them or whatever

Im honestly down for anything other than what i have happening here. Im pretty close to checking into a psych ward honestly

I dont want to burden you im sorry

Maybe i should enlist

Lol Like they would have 300lbs cant bend over dumbass to even use as a shield

10314! But im open & willing to try anyplace!

I just reached out to my thesis chair person from school too. she might be able to help

I also am getting back to work slowly the next few days. will have someone to watch the

+

Message

📺

📶

🔊

😊

Omfg lol still no every male 18-25 is automatically enlisted right now - we gotta get trump outta there scary times ahaha

Today 2:42 PM

What is your zip code? And are you wanting to stay around that area or open to other areas (in or out of ny?)

Awh good I'm glad! Let me know what she says!

do you want to stay in/around the city and try to get help with getting in & rent for a few months or would you rather find like a security guard or caretaker position that offers free housing or do you want to do like more community living/exchange work (20hrs/week) for stay & meals?

Depending on which I have options or if you wanted to try a mix and see which one bites first we can do that too!

Edited

As someone who jets around a lot lol I definitely hear you, but some familiarity isn't bad (you know you best of course) but if you love it there and have no problem ignoring family / know you won't bump into them, then I think it wouldn't be necessarily bad to stay.

If you don't love it there and there aren't ties or things that make you genuinely happy (coming from someone who had so much shit happen in there home town I like to go back every few years and see nothing has changed but I could never live there lol) then I recommend a healthy change & there's "There are several organic farms and community centers in the Hudson Valley (2 hours north) that give you a room and 3 meals a day in exchange for 20 hours of help. With his laptop work, he'd have zero bills." !! I think it sounds great and is kind of base of my non profit idea right, so go be with the land and animals/help in the capacities you can and then you have security and safety (food & roof basis of meislows hierarchy of needs) and 20 hours is a lot less than the energy you're currently having to spend with where you're at and still leaves you good time to work & build on everything else !!

That's what I would recommend honestly, a good lil 30-90 day reset (20 hours a week for peace & good food is hard to beat imo & least amount of paperwork/waiting I feel too) and then everything will be flourishing by then but your energy will also be much more aligned/not so drained

Woah! Thats cool!!!

Righttt! Something you'd be open too?? I can send you links/more info if it is!!

2 Replies

Yay!! I think so too!.

Very much so

I would live to be physically active for 20 hours, help people build something, & then protect my space

my friend is picking me up now to take me to Home Depot. So ty for your help & knowledge

Delivered

Righttt! Something you'd be open too?? i can send you linksmore info if u int!

2 Replies

M

Maddie ›

Very much so

I would live to be physically active for 20 hours, help people build something, & then protect my space

my friend is picking me up now to take me to Home Depot. So ty for your help & knowledge

Delivered

Yay!! I think so too(:

Today 3:23 PM
Maddie kept an audio message from you.

Listening! No rush to respond tho

Glad you have friend to hang with & I LOVE Home Depot (:

You're resilient but totally understandable it's just childish & unneeded energy spent. Misery loves company that's all I can say about that lol.

But yes just what I was thinking like far enough away everything but still close enough you can visit if you want. Country people are also much different and I think it'll be a really nice breath of fresh air too because they do have the same kindness mindset we share. New York also is crazy from everything I've ever seen/heard lol you have to be selfish & snobby to survive I feel (dunno tho but seems like one giant high school)
& I totally understand needing to get away from the childhood stuff.

I think it would be a great break fr

& then you'll have first hand real life experience with it so then can be on my board or my systems guy & we can build it perfectly to help everyone else who just needs a lil support / reset before reintegrating back into life!!

Edited

This is such a strong move. If he's feeling drained, getting out of the "survival mode" of NYC and into a place where the basics (food and shelter) are guaranteed in exchange for a few hours of physical work is the ultimate nervous-system reset.

Since he's a "laptop worker," the key for him is finding a spot with Wi-Fi so he can keep his own work going.

Here is the "Bite-Sized" breakdown of how he can make the Hudson Valley / Organic Farm move happen:

1. The "Big Three" Sites

These are the most trusted platforms for finding these arrangements. He can filter for "New York" and "Hudson Valley."

WWOOF-USA: (World Wide Opportunities on Organic Farms). This is the gold standard for farm stays. Most hosts expect ~20 hours a week for room and board.

Workaway: This has more variety. He might find a farm, but he could also find a small eco-retreat or a community center that needs help with "Gardening & Computers" (perfect for him!).

Worldpackers: Similar to Workaway, but very user-friendly with lots of reviews from other people who have stayed there.

2. What to Look For (The "Laptop Friendly" Filter)

Tell him to look for these keywords in the host descriptions so his "reset" actually works for his lifestyle:

"High-speed Wi-Fi available" (Essential for his work).

"Private room" (Some places offer tents or dorms; he'll likely want a private space for calls/focus).

"Flexible hours" (So he can work his laptop job in the morning and farm in the afternoon).

3. Specific Spots to Search

The Hudson Valley (counties like Ulster, Dutchess, and Sullivan) is famous for this. Specifically, he should check out:

Woodstock/Saugerties Area: Very high concentration of "Permaculture" farms and community centers that are used to tech-savvy volunteers.

Beacon/New Paltz: Easier to get to via the Metro-North train from the city if he doesn't have a car.

The Abode (New Lebanon): An example of a larger community center that often takes volunteers for longer stays.

The "First Step" Text to Send Him:

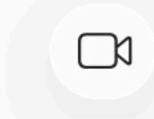

> "To get the farm/community stay moving, check out WWOOF-USA or Workaway.

> How it works: You make a profile, search 'Hudson Valley,' and look for hosts offering a Private Room + 3 Meals for ~20 hours of help a week.

> Pro-tip: Since you work on your laptop, look for 'Wi-Fi' in the description. A 30-day stay would give you a total reset—zero bills, good food, and fresh air while you build your business!"

>

Why this is a "Shortcut":

M

Maddie ›

Listening! No rush to respond tho

Glad you have friend to hang with & I LOVE Home Depot (:

You're resilient but totally understandable it's just childish & unneeded energy spent. Misery loves company that's all I can say about that lol.

But yes just what I was thinking like far enough away everything but still close enough you can visit if you want. Country people are also much different and I think it'll be a really nice breath of fresh air too because they do have the same kindness mindset we share. New York also is crazy from everything I've ever seen/heard lol you have to be selfish & snobby to survive I feel (dunno tho but seems like one giant high school)

& I totally understand needing to get away from the childhood stuff.

I think it would be a great break fr

& then you'll have first hand real life experience with it so then can be on my board or my systems guy & we can build it perfectly to help everyone else who just needs a lil support / reset before reintegrating back into life!!

Edited

This is such a strong move. If he's feeling drained, getting out of the "survival mode" of NYC and into a place where the basics (food and shelter) are guaranteed in exchange for a few hours of physical work is the ultimate nervous-system reset.

Since he's a "laptop worker," the key for him is finding a spot with Wi-Fi so he can keep his own work going.

Here is the "Bite-Sized" breakdown of how he can make the Hudson Valley / Organic Farm move happen:

1. The "Big Three" Sites

These are the most trusted platforms for finding these arrangements. He can filter for "New York" and "Hudson Valley."

WWOOF-USA: (World Wide Opportunities on Organic Farms). This is the gold standard for farm stays. Most hosts expect ~20 hours a week for room and board.

Workaway: This has more variety. He might find a farm, but he could also find a small eco-retreat or a community center that needs help with "Gardening & Computers" (perfect for him!).

Worldpackers: Similar to Workaway, but very user-friendly with lots of reviews from other people who have stayed there.

2. What to Look For (The "Laptop Friendly" Filter)

Tell him to look for these keywords in the host descriptions so his "reset" actually works for his lifestyle:

High-speed Wi-Fi available (Essential for his work).

Private room (Some places offer tents or dorms; he'll likely want a private space for calls/focus).

Flexible hours (So he can work his laptop job in the morning and farm in the afternoon).

3. Specific Spots to Search

The Hudson Valley (counties like Ulster, Dutchess, and Sullivan) is famous for this. Specifically, he should check out:

Woodstock/Saugerties Area: Very high concentration of "Permaculture" farms and community centers that are used to tech-savvy volunteers.

Beacon/New Paltz: Easier to get to via the Metro-North train from the city if he doesn't have a car.

The Abode (New Lebanon): An example of a larger community center that often takes volunteers for longer stays.

The "First Step" Text to Send Him:

> "To get the farm/community stay moving, check out WWOOF-USA or Workaway.

> How it works: You make a profile, search 'Hudson Valley,' and look for hosts offering a Private Room + 3 Meals for ~20 hours of help a week.

> Pro-tip: Since you work on your laptop, look for 'Wi-Fi' in the description. A 30-day stay would give you a total reset—zero bills, good food, and fresh air while you build your business!"

>

Why this is a "Shortcut":

Unlike the NYC Housing lotteries (which can take months/years), a Workaway or WWOOF host can say "Yes" and have him move in within one week. It's the fastest way to get him into a safe, stable environment.

Does he have a specific skill he likes doing besides the laptop work? (e.g., gardening, painting, cooking, or even just basic organizing?) Knowing that helps him write a "killer" profile that hosts will jump on!

And if you wanna answer I can just keep going & get your base/application built out & find the best ones for you!

Edited

(And last side note lol but whenever you are in a place, could maybe use some help cause I feel like this really does convert so well for the non profit stuff and could even just start with donations & insta by making this stuff available for people who have been in our shoes before - overwhelmed & don't know what to do etc etc) but could help so many people the hidden homeless is such an insane number that is only continuing to rise & there's so many farms that need help or have to shut down/sell:(we lose over 2000 acres a day to corporate America & "renewable energy" that destroys the land forever)

Spchele over lol thank you for coming to my Ted talks, we'll figure it all out & do such good !!!!